On the 1st of September the Virago proceeded to the bay of Tacinaki, where the reunius of Admiral Fried were interest, and came back the communicated important information in regard to the topographical situation of Petropauloval. On the 3d September acousted of war was held on beard the Forte, and a second attack planned for the nations, the English marines and the French reserve forming a special force of one hundred and sity, ridinent. The greatest activity prevailed on board the men of war. Staty cartridges were discitual. Activities of the English Moret. Capt. De La Grandsier was appointed to the command of the French reserve plations; M. Thomas the Forte's crew, having under his orders. Mears. Garwain and De Kersaint. The general command of the beats was given to M. Dolorascel, and the bouplal at all and arrangements of a chief of the English force, the second of the Command. The Command of the C of provisions and stores. They only attempted a coup the math, and not a regular siege.

Throughout the entire duration of this expedition and the voyage which preceded it, the most perfect harmony has reigned between the English and French. On land and on sea, at anchor in the Sandwich Islands, before the fire of Fetropaulovski, the officers and soldiers of both nations have made themselves acquainted by a long contact only to love and esteem each other; the two nations, previously rivals, friends to-day, yielding to the same thought and mingling their blood apport the same field of battle. In the polar seas of Asia and the coast of Romersund the same sympathy and femulation reign. It was side by side with our soldiers that the gallant Captain Parker fell, whose last cry was a rallying one. It was at his side that our officers and bailors fell, decimated by an invisible enemy. A friendship founded on mutual esteem and cemented by like memorials assures forever the union of the two greatest flations of the earth.

The San Francisco Herald of the 5th says:—

We learn, from another source, that the total loss on the British side did not fall far short of 120 men, and that the casualties among the French were equally numerous. When the marines landed for the purpose of spiking the guns of the abundoned forts, (under the cover of the guns of the fleet,) an attack was almost the last thing that was expected: but the moment the Capzain of the Marines showed himself he was shot dead by the Russian sharp-shooters, who lay in ambuscade in the bushes, and every man of whom a glimpse could be raught shared the same fate. On the marines pressed, notwithstanding the galling hidden fire, and when they endeavored to retrace their steps, it is stated that they dost their path and found themselves suddenly brought gup by a sand-bank, or precipice, upwards of seventy feet in depth. Deadly volleys were poured on them from the year, and there was no aiternative left but to jump or be shot dead. In this dilemma some leaped from the precipice and were killed, and those who remained shared the same fate. It was what might be termed a herrible dilemma, either horn of which was equally fatal. It is admitted, on all sides, that the Russians fought with a bravery and determination seldom pualled. As an example of the unflinching courage dishinged by them, an anecdote is related of a Russian antinet, against whom upwards of sixty rifle shots were read, but nothing could overcome his stoicism, and he bontinued to pace up and down the ramparts of the fort in which he was stationed, without turning his head juitar to the left or to the right; he excepted. The condition of the French vessels in port bears ample testimony to the skill of the Russians in gunnery, and it is stated that it will take a considerable sum to make the processary repairs. The British fr gate President is reported to be in a very disabled condition, and it was with difficulty that she reached Vancouver's Island. One shot from the Russian forts killed thirte The San Francisco Herald of the 5th says:-

The abandonment of their forts and batteries under a gombined attack from land and soa was skilfully and pavantageously effected, and the determined manner in which the invaders were driven back to their boats and 20 sea, reflects great credit on Russian provess. If these lacts are not sufficient to place the so-called victory in its true light, the studied avoidance of the publishing the number slain, with the exception of a few officers, seems conclusive that a disastrous encounter was sustained.

The French fleet is refitting in the harbor of San the selseo. One of the Times reporters thus describes a

The repairs of the breaches were partially finished, and the lieutenant, to whose kindness we were much indebted, pointed to the new and unpainted plank with apparent pride, as if to give us a double assurance that the Forte had taken a full, share in the bloody battle with the Russian forts and men-of-war. The foremast and mirenmast had been considerably damaged; but as the officers of the facet expected to encounter rough sease between the scene of the engagement and San Erancisco, they took the precaution of repairing them and all other serious injuries before they left the vicinity of Petropaulovski.

The same authority says:—

From all we could gather, the Bussians fought with desperate bravery. One poor Frenchman in the advancing column was struck by a grape shot from the fortification, in the stomach, and literally cut in twain. It was in this foray that the loss of life was so great. The officers say that they lost fifty men, and that the Russians could not have lost less. Finding that a further attack upon the town by land was useless, they retreated to their ships, and resumed their stracks from the sea. We were informed further, that the allied fleet fought under the disadvantage of a heavy fog. Their shells were almost useless. The last reason which was assigned for abandoning the attack, and one upon which lient. Bomilton laid great stress, was want of provisions. They had no store ship with them. Their supply was assant, and there was no place along the whole coast to which they could repair to lay in a fresh one. Having a great many men on board, and the season being far advanced, they concluded that they could not prelong the blockade without running imminent risk of distress from want of necessary supplies. We were further informed that the Russians had received large reinforcements from Siberia, and that from the mouth of the river Amour, running through a great portion of the Chinese possessions, now in the possession of the Russian fleet, they could get supplies to any extent.

The Alla gives the following exact account of the loss of life sustained by the allied, wounded, and left on shore. The total number of men killed, wounded, and left on shore belonging to the French squadron is 98, and of the English squadron, 111 men; making a total of 209 killed, wounded and left on shore.

From the Lima Foreign New (Oct. 7) we have the following description of Petropaulovski as it was before the attack:—

By the arrival of the American brig Boston, Captain Hedges, we have advices from Petropaulovski, a Russian port on the penisula of Kamschatta, up to July 16. From a gendeman attached to the Boston, we have gathered to the granting the movements of the fluor of single one so used. There is a monument in Petropaulovski, a simple column surmounted by a globe, surrounded by a rading, and bearing an inscription. "To Captain Vitus Behring," in Russian. (Behring sailed on his voyage of discovery from Kamschatka, where his vessels were constructed.) No edifice demands particular attention. In the church the rites of the Greek Church are conducted with great splendor and solemnity. There is, besides, an hospital and a school. The population at the time of the visit of La Venus, (1836,) amounted to 385 men and 221 women, the greater part employed by government.

The next attack is expected at the mouth of the Amoor, of which little is known. Its navigation was ceded to China before modern science and enterprise had been brought to bear on it; consequently it may rest in its present darkness for a lengthened period.

It was in 1658 that a treaty was entered into by China with Peter the Great, by which the latter gave up a portion of his conquest on this great river for the advantage of a regular land traffic between the two empires. But it was soon found that a fair at Kinchia, or a factory at Pekin, was a poor compensation for the loss of this valuable artery to Central Asia, by which cession the possession of Kamschatka, and the islands beyond, are reduced to half their value. Had the mavigation of the river been open to the commercial and civilizing advantages it would have conferred.

The Amoor Territory is the most northeasterly portion of the Chinese empire, and extends from about 45 deg. to 55 deg. north latitude, and from shout 115 deg. to 140 deg. cast longitude.

The Amoor Territory is the most northeasterly portion for a thousand miles or more; thence, with a gradual bend, it runs northeast to the ocean. Its supposed source is about 56 deg. north latitude, 110 deg. cast longitude; mouth, 53 deg. north latitude, 110 deg. cast longitude.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL. MONEY MARKET.

FRIDAY, Nov. 10-5 P. M.

The stock market was very much depressed this morning, and for a time psices ran down very fast. All the leading fancies were operated in to some extent, and most of the transactions were on time. At the first board Hudson Convertible Bonds declined & per cent; Illinois Central Bonds, M; New York Central Bonds, 1; Nicaragua Transit, 1; Cumberland Coal, 14; Reading Railread, 14; New York Central Railroad, 14; Eric Railroad, S; Hudson Railroad, M; Michigan Central Railroad 14. At the second board the market was still lower, with large sales. Erie Railroad fell off 11/4 per cent; Nicarages Transit, ½; New York Central Bonds, 1; Hud-son Raffroad Convertibles, ½; Cumberland Co., ½; Can-ton Co., ½; Reading Railroad, ½; Hudson Railroad, ½; New York Central Railroad, 1; Harlem Railroad, 13. Stonington Railroad sold at 63—a decline of four per cent since last sale. There was a great difference to-day between prices for cash and buyer's option, showing the value of money, and that holders are realizing from neces-sity. The fall is stocks to-day is unwarranted entirely by the circumstances. It was no more or less than a wild panic, without the most remote cause. A few days will suffice to bring about the sober second thought, and we shall then have a reaction that will astonish those who have been carried away by the present absurd ex-

The January dividend of the Michigan Central Railroad Company will probably be paid in bonds at par, instead of mensy. The eight per cent convertible bonds of the company are offered at pas, and the inconvertible for the late depreciation in the market value of the stock. The true policy would be to pass the dividend

A recent mail from Lake Superior brought excellent accounts from the Forest, Copper Falls, North Western, Phænix, Algomah, Humboldt, Winthrop, Star, Toltec and others. We give a short extract from a letter of the Toltec agent to the treasurer in Boston, as follows.

Tourse Mine, Oct. 20, 1854.—The mine is improving finely, and we are getting out every day good stamp and barrel copper, and small masses varying in weight from three hundred to one thousand pounds each. The Toltee mine will rank among the first in the country in less time than one year. As there is no value on copper stocks at present, I am satisfied that by next summer a good many will repret selling their Toltee stock for $5 and $6 per share when they see the tons of copper coming to market. You wrote in your letter in regard to burning our stamp and barrel work; you may rest assured that there will be no work left undone, in relation to getting copper to market. It is copper that will tel these hard times, not letters. I have got the Toltee crops all secured. We raised 2,500 bushels of potatoes, 800 lay. All our supplies are up except the 26d forms for tons of hay for the Algomah Copper Co. Every warehouse is full at the mouth of the Outenagon.

The Cincinnati Gazette, of the 8th, says:—

The week has not marked any improvement in money matters. Confidence is still wanting, and, as a consequence, financial affairs continue in a most unsatisfactory condition. Ranks or bankers discount but little, and there is but little money to be had outside. So that the circumstances of berrowers are even more straitened than at any previous time. Rates of interest-way from one to three per cent per month. The payments on the fourth were heavy, but they were made with much more promptness than was anticipated, and the failures were confined to small dealers not much known in business. With reference to the immediate future, the prospect at present is dark and uncertain. The river continues low, and this depresses and embarrasses not only moreantile but also manufacturing interests, and at present writing there is every indication of fair weather. A good stage of water would do more towards relieving the money pressane here than the combined efforts of financiers. Merchandise and manufactures have accumulated to a large extent, and until these can be sent off and realized upon, parties interested cannot experience any material relief.
